Using Creativity to Find Your Path: Independent Learning Guide

The role models in the video "Using Creativity to Find Your Path" provide powerful life advice on finding your passions, identifying opportunities, and using your interests to guide you down your path to happiness.

Watch the video "Using Creativity to Find Your Path" at least once. Then read each statement below. Think carefully about each question before you answer it.

1. The world is full of opportunities! Don't limit your career goals to only jobs you're familiar with.

What types of jobs did the role models have? Were any of these jobs new or surprising to you? If so, which ones? How could you learn about other types of unusual jobs or jobs that you haven't heard of before?

2. Listeners learned that pursuing your interests and believing in yourself can help lead you down the path towards a life that will make you happy.

What are your interests or what things do you love to do? How do you make time for these interests alongside your schoolwork and other commitments? Why do you think it's important to continue to pursue these hobbies or activities?

- 3. One role model told us that "the best thing young people can do is to be open and excited about change and creative about looking for opportunities."

How do you feel about change? What could you do to be more open or excited for changes in your life? How can change lead to opportunity?

- 4. Trying new things can feel hard or scary. But it is important to expose yourself to lots of different opportunities and ideas.

When is the last time you tried something new? What happened? Do you think it gets easier or harder to try new things as you get older? Why?

- 5. A role model said, "You have to live a life that's going to make you happy at the end of the day."

What kind of a life do you think would make you happy? You might think about family, friends, a career, or other goals. What things do you need to do now to set yourself up for that type of life?

6. The final role model told us that "creativity is a survival tool."

What do you think she meant? Do you think people that can apply creativity to their lives are ultimately more successful than people that can't? Why or why not?
